Hi,

My submission is against the Life Insurance companies that have continued to increase their LEVEL premiums on existing policies. The increases have been beyond any projections given by the life companies and it makes you wonder how a 25% increase can be a actuarial error where people are living longer and the data that they work with has become richer and better over the years. This is unfair for consumers that plan ahead and pay extra on their policies short term so they can keep polices in the long run but premiums become unaffordable in the long run and they need to cancel the policy. This is deceiving!

Sincerest,

Ash
