From Anthony J. Hudson

Dear Sir,

I wish to make the following submission: It is said that if history teaches us anything, it is that people do not learn from history.

It is my hope, as an Australian, that we defy that observation and learn from the past. Separating the speculative aspects of banking from the more regular aspects of banking as per Carter Glass ect would provide a significant improvement to the structure of banking by reducing the potential for looting by unscrupulous operators in the industry. This alone may not be enough, but it certainly seems to me to be the minimum recommendation that would both justify the costs of the Royal Commission and cement within the minds of Australians that a worthwhile objective has been achieved. I pray that the Commission will seek at the very least this minimum, so that in the future, Australians can look back upon the Commission, its staff, and its outcome, with a healthy happy and positive perspective.

Yours in good faith

Anthony J. Hudson
