

SUBMISSION ON POLICY ISSUES IDENTIFIED IN THE INTERIM REPORT

Submitted By: Ian Barry

Email: [REDACTED]

Phone Number: [REDACTED]

Submission for: My Self

Name of other person, business or organisation:

Do you agree to your submission being published: Yes

Do you agree to your full name being published: Yes

Your submission:

Dear Commissioner,

Firstly I would like to thank you for the great work that has been done so far and the very candid interim report. In your interim report, banking structure and more specifically bank separation (Glass Steagall) was mentioned on several times. This has been historically proven to be the only way to keep the bankers in line and the entire national economy healthy. Bob Katter has already tabled a banking separation bill. This bill will do the job just nicely. The Royal Commission must recommend that this bill is debated and made into law as soon as possible to protect the people and the national economy.

And of course there is the regulators. If you had a guard dog this useless you would of shot it and chucked it over the back fence so long ago the sun would of bleach its bones white by now. But not our our great regulators, best in the world. The Royal Commission must put Dr Wilson Sy on the stand. Dr Wilson Sy has already blown the whistle on his former employer, APRA. It takes great courage to do what he has done. Put him on the stand so that he can tell the whole story with the protection of the Royal commission behind him. All the crimes of the banks that have been exposed by the Royal commission happened under the watch of the regulators. They must be scrutinized.

During the Royal commission so far I have heard a lot of fancy words and phrases used to describe what I would call stealing and lying. If I was to take something that I had no entitlement to off someone else, it would be called stealing and I would be rightly facing the law. If I lied to take some thing that I had no entitlement to it would be called lying and stealing and I would rightly be facing the law. So why does this banker class of criminals get to keep the loot, get rewarded and never face the law? Theses people knowing conspired to deceive good honest hard working Australians out of a future only to selfishly enrich themselves. At the same time white anting the national economy and being protected by the regulators. Those found to have committed crimes should have their day in court and their decades in jail.

I don't know how to spell, but I do know the difference between wrong and right. I don't know where to put the comas but I do know where to put theses criminal bankers. Despite the best efforts of Prime Ministers, politician, bankers and their lobbyists the Royal commission is doing a great job to expose the criminal cabal of high finance and their predatory practices. The Royal commission must continue this great job by recommending Bob Katter's banking separation bill be debated and legislated as well as putting Dr Wilson Sy on the stand and the crooks in jail.