Dear Sirs, I am writing to make a submission to demand structural change in the Australian Banking System. This country needs the Glass-Steagall Separation of Banks Bill. Our Banks have not shown that they can be trusted to manage these conflicts of interest and they must be taken out of their hands. Another item that troubles me is the way that Banks charge small business for the use of their Epost machines. The banks should be tumbling over each other in their efforts to gain the business and be offering competitive rates for the use of these machines. After all, the banks are closing down their branches and saving money in other areas so they should be made to help small business. Thanks for your attention.
