A Register of Victims of Banking should be established. A panel of accountants, not lawyers, must be appointed to review all cases registered, whether they have been through the unfair court system or not. Bank customers who are not satisfied with their outcome. I like others will not go away. This process must be paid for by the banks. Victims do not have any money so the court process is flawed before you start.

The 6 year Limitation Act should be ignored or struck out as any defence to any banking institution as all banking cases involve misconduct and withholding of information by banking staff.

Australian public servants and politicians have been aware of the banking fiasco for years and done nothing about it. "Your not in my electorate", "I am not in a position to help"

The cost of the Royal Commission and any further financial burdens must be financed by the commonwealths 'Future Fund' and or the Banks, not the Tax payers. Tax payers are victims.

Public servants and politicians 'who had knowledge and did not act upon that knowledge', are totally responsible for this mess and now they must pay for it.

The Banking Royal Commission and the Royal Commission into Child Abuse should never be happening. What a disgrace.

We have 2 000 000 public servants in Australia.

Who are they serving?

What do they do?

Why should public servants and politicians be rewarded (with superannuation) when they and their colleagues have consistently failed to serve the public, instead turning a blind eye.
