The issue of redress has been largely ignored

It is an issue aligned with both access to justice, without which, redress is more difficult

I recommend Michael Sanderson's Equality of Arms paper. This demonstrates that bank victims like myself are armed on a most unequal

Basis to those of banks and large financial institutions

The courts are not inquisitive and do not provide assistance to to self defending litigants like me. It is overwhelming to try to analyse all legal aspects of my own case knowing my adversary, a bank is armed with substantially greater knowledge funds and expertise

Thank you

Redress needs substantial investigation
