In response to the following section/points:

7.5 Business structures

- Do the events that have happened raise any issue about business structures?
- Do the events that have happened invite consideration of whether structural changes should now be made?
- More particularly, do they provoke examination of how and to what extent conflicts of interest and duty arising from the structure of the business can be managed?

We need Glass Steagall type legislation now as a matter of extreme urgency. There is a bill for just this thing in parliament right now. Members of parliament must go ahead with it ASAP before the property bubble implodes, "necessitating" more dishonest actions by entities with vested interestinterests not in the interests of the people of Australia.
