I worked as a contract [REDACTED] for [REDACTED] in the early 2000's on the Sunshine Coast in Queensland for approximately 6 to seven years. But I could never understand why [REDACTED] never paid a superannuation contribution given that my salary represented my total income. Subsequently [REDACTED] let us all go with an invitation to reapply for our jobs as a corporate entity to solve this dilemma. The lop sided nature of this arrangement in light of the former CEO's generous retirement package has revived my long held questioning regarding the legality of that situation. Clarification on this matter would certainly for myself and many others who were in the same situation would be most appreciated.
