To whom it may concern, I wish to make a point that the 22 percent fee applied to early release of super funds (before designated age) was damaging to my quality of life. Having undiagnosed mental health most of my life I found that this penalty and the capping of $10 thousand by the super industry is a an act of human rights abuse. When I needed my money that I trustingly placed in the super and desperately needed I had to live in poverty for 6 months on unemployment benefits as this was another decision imposed by the super industry - another hurdle to bear whilst suffering from mental illness. No human should be subjected to those inhuman set of conditions ...no one! Paul Hayes
