Banks shouldn't own super, or any other financial business. The way this system is structured leaves the people vulnerable when they should be supported and strengthened by the structures in place that are supposed to protect them but instead, protects and fortifies the bank at the expense of our communities. Super is just one of the reasons Australia needs a Glass-Steagall structural separation of the banking. It must be implemented now before the whole system collapses due to laws that give unfair advantages to banks over individuals. The change to a Glass-Steagall structure is imperative to assure a sound financial future for all, not just the banks.
