

SUBMISSION ON POLICY ISSUES RAISED IN ROUND 5

Submitted By: Bernadine Mccullagh

Email: [REDACTED]

Phone Number: [REDACTED]

Submission for: My Self

Name of other person, business or organisation:

Do you agree to your submission being published: Yes

Do you agree to your full name being published: Yes

Your submission:

It is clear we have all been informed that our regulators that are in place to regulate the banks have done a stellar job, unfortunately these regulators are working to maintain the criminality of activities of our banks. It is interesting how their activities against the general population is perceived, and how our judiciary has clear exceptions when it comes to the banks. I for one am sick to the stomach when it's clear that the obvious blatant corruption is stuck right up our noses but we are all numbed before we respond. Gob smacked with the sheer audacity. I am sure that other submissions will go into great detail in how we can adopt the Glass-Steagall form of banking to separate the banks with the intent that it will stop the banks looting and preserve our superannuation. This system is the preferred and hugely researched option. It has a history of its success in operation, and I fully support it. But make no mistake this is history in the making. Those who have been given the task and power to change the destructive and evil systems MUST do so in all its entirety. Expose whom ever they are in whatever position they hold, regardless of their blood line, corporation, religion, or affiliation, only then we will truly disinfect the system for our children's future. We could of course, turn away and hope that this mess fades into the background? this option that has been adopted since the deregulation of the banking system in the 1980s has led to financial ruin and will continually be exposed in society, the bankers have lied to the general public in the past and relied on the fact that the majority of the population were not privy to information and in the dark. With the benefits of the internet and speed of journalism, exposure is inevitable, thanks to our modern society, and then where will we be? we will be right back where we are now, in the same spot. Please consider this opportunity as it is a unique time in the present we will be judged in the future, we simply cannot get it wrong yet again. Clean out the system for us all and all of our future generations. yours faithfully Bernadine Mccullagh