To whom it may concern. I wish to have legislative changes to reflect a division in the banking sector to remove superannuation from the speculative practices currently risking the mandatory contributions deposited by Australian Taxpayers. The practices carried out in the banking sector at present in my opinion risks the loss of financial stability and further exposes the behaviour that highlights ethical questioning of the banking and financial sector. Legislating Glass-Steagall structural separation is a process that I submit as a solution to the banking sectors risking Australian Superannuation funds.
