Being a lawful citizen of australia by birthright, i find the diminishing of our freedom of choice as gifted under the constitution as a primary concern. Alterations to laws and legislation have occurred more sublimely in order to mask conservative debate on the repercussions of these amendments to the public. As a taxpayer amongst the millions of australians who through the breadth of their toil support our legislative assembly through our tax dollars we as YOUR paymaster demand the right to choose who how when and why our hard earned dollars may be utilised by corporations who by their own reckless subculture and behavior have endangered the stability of our financial system and the future prosperity of countless generations of australians. Our government is charged to protect the interests of the australian people first and foremost. The bail in laws passed recently voted on by an absurdly low amount of politicians and rushed through in order to stop critical amendments in order to protect the australian people first is a massive circumvention of our rights. This is an example of corporate protectionism and greed that has been exacerbated by a period of vast wealth and economic growth in which reckless behaviors by corporate sectors and government officials with conflicts of interest have facilitated a corruption of a system originally intended to serve the people. Household debt, Government payrolls have exploded with government expenditure which is an abhorrent failure of policy, design, implementation and control. Financial recklessness by the banking sector has spawned a generation of people who do not understand the consequences of debt in the long term facilitating a period of immense pain should the current financial system be placed under duress from international markets. In the long term more government indicates a failing system which does not facilitate ascension to a higher level of understanding and prosperity. This is the importance of the glass steagall bank separation bill in order to protect the people who dutifully have toiled and served in order for us all to exist in this blessed land. Should banks wish to gamble they must do so with their own paycheck not borrowed funds from the working man woman and child.
